Celebrating Scotland's Art

Scottish National Gallery, new entrance (Cadpeople & Hoskins Architects)

The Scottish National Gallery, home to the world's most important collection of Scottish art, is currently undergoing an extensive renovation which will triple its available exhibition space for Scottish art, transform the visitor experience, and enable the realisation of the collection's full potential, helping the public understand both the history and the impact of Scottish art nationally and internationally.

Curators from the National Galleries of Scotland will reassess highlights from the paintings and the drawings collection, and introduce the new setting in which they will be displayed.
